

CRIME PREVENTION ADVICE

No Cold Calling Zones

If your street suffers from the nuisance and criminal consequences of rogue traders knocking at yours and your neighbours' doors you should get together with them and approach the council's Trading Standards department to see if they can assist in setting up a No Cold Calling Zone. A No Cold Caller Zone is a designated area where the resident community declare they no longer wish to accept traders calling at their homes without an appointment. They operate in some parts of the UK and the designated area is marked with street signs that tell doorstep traders that they are not welcome. They clearly indicate to the trader that the residents are aware of their practices and look out for each other. Evidence from a number of councils who operate the scheme suggests that people feel more confident about saying "No" to cold callers in a No Cold Calling Zone and more importantly the number of cold calls does reduce. Residents are encouraged to keep an eye out for each other, use crime prevention measures at the door and report details about cold callers working in the zone to the local trading standards and police

A recent press release by Crimestoppers has highlighted the need for the public to come forward and provide information around drug related crime. Although the press release focuses on Clacton it is equally as relevant to Harwich and the Tendring area as a whole. Like Clacton, Harwich does not have a significant drug problem but neither can it be ignored that it is ever present in our community and efforts by police to combat this continue to be on-going. Over recent months we have executed some good warrants where arrests have been made which has been as a result of the public providing us with good Intelligence. I want to encourage the public to continue to talk to the police or provide us with information through crimestoppers around this subject which both impacts and affects the quality of life in the community as a whole.

One of the areas investigated by police into the recent increase in shed and garage burglaries in the Harwich area is whether these are a result of our young people in the town funding their soft drug habits, and if so we need to bring this under control and stop it. Therefore I would encourage anyone with information as to who is responsible for these crimes to come forward and talk to us. Any information provided will be treated with the strictest of confidence
